Paula Tackett reported that the Construction Committee met yesterday, and most of the multi-purpose space was completed, except for some finishes. As the contractor and architects move forward to finalize and price the plans for the kitchen, they notified us that there has been a dramatic increase in the prices on metal and wood. Thus, before NMSA experiences more of an increase, a Notice to Proceed was signed to order and lock-in the prices on those critical materials, in an amount not to exceed $50,000.

The committee also discussed the status of completing the kitchen and gave an initial review of the pricing to date. The original pricing of the kitchen, which initial estimate was in 2020 was for $597,000 and the current pricing (minus a couple of items) is now coming in around $612,000, but that amount includes 2 additional items that were not in the original estimate.

Also, sod was recently installed in the courtyard, although it can't be walked on for a month.
